

FUNDER WEBINAR

ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE IMPLICATIONS OF THE CLEAN POWER PLAN

JULY 13, 2016

1:00 - 2:30 pm ET

Co-Sponsored by the Environmental Grantmakers Association,
The Consultative Group on Biological Diversity &
The EDGE Funders Alliance on behalf of the

Tishman Environment & Design Center (TEDC) at The New School &
the Building Equity & Alignment for Impact Initiative

To Register Visit bit.ly/CPP_EJ_Webinar

The US EPA's Clean Power Plan (CPP) rule is one of the most significant national environmental laws enacted in decades. As such, the CPP will set terms for how our nation tackles climate change mitigation broadly, and how we respond to the communities most impacted by this ecological crisis and the industries causing it.

As courts rule on the progress of the CPP and states consider their implementation plans, this is a critical opportunity to examine the environmental justice (EJ) and equity issues associated with this plan. Join us for this webinar where we'll present a set of white papers produced by Visiting Scholars sponsored by The New School's Tishman Environment and Design Center. The papers take an in-depth look at specific issues in the CPP that impact frontline communities, including - air pollution, carbon trading, challenges for clean energy opportunities, incentives for dirty energy and the history of the EJ movement's engagement in climate policies.

Moderator: Michelle Depass, Director of TEDC (The New School)

Speakers:

Dr. Ana Isabel Baptista, The New School, Garbage, Power And Environmental Justice: The Clean Power Plan

Cecil Corbin-Mark, WE ACT for Environmental Justice, History of The Environmental Justice Movement and Climate Policies

Dr. Cecilia Martinez, Center for Earth, Energy and Democracy, Justice And The Clean Power Plan: New Challenges In The Greenhouse

Dr. Nicky Sheats, Thomas Edison State College, New Jersey
Environmental Justice Alliance, Climate Change Mitigation Policy And Emissions Reductions For Environmental Justice Communities

This webinar is part of a national Clean Power Plan Forum being organized by the Building Equity & Alignment for Impact Initiative. If you are unable to make this call, but want to learn more about this forum, please feel free to contact Ananda Lee Tan: ananda@edgefunders.org