

TISHMAN CENTER · SEPTEMBER 24, 2021

Climate Week 2021 Recap

This year's Climate Week at The New School featured some great conversations about the political economy of COVID featuring a noted epidemiologist, a panel of people from across the African diaspora talking about impacts of the climate crisis and the launch of the Resilient Urban Futures book from the Urban Systems Lab. You can check out the full videos below for some of the events and feel free to leave us comments about what you think!

Climate Crisis and the African Diaspora

Climate Crisis Resiliency and the African Diaspora

Resilient Urban Futures Book Launch 2021

Resilient Urban Futures Book Launch

The Political Ecology of COVID-19: From Global Agribusiness t...

The Political Ecology of COVID-19: From Global Agribusiness to the Urban Campus

Hoodwinked in the Hothouse: Examining False Corporate Schemes being advanced through the Paris Agreement